

Editorial Staff

Editor-in-Chief

Anne Berry is a second year Master of Public Policy student at The George Washington University, concentrating in health policy. Anne earned a bachelor's degree in English and a certificate in health policy from Duke University, and a certificate in editing from New York University. She currently works at a consulting firm and, prior to that, completed a health policy internship with the US Senate. She has previously worked in health policy research as a research project manager and as a communications specialist. Anne began her career as an editor, and worked for several years in book publishing.

Managing Editor

Kristin Hubing is a second year Master of Public Administration student at The George Washington University, where she earned her BA in international affairs in 2005. She also works as a writer for the GW School of Medicine and Health Sciences. Prior to pursuing her graduate studies, Kristin spent five years working in development at Partners In Health, a global public health nonprofit. She enjoys reading, watching movies, drinking tea, and playing Bananagrams.

Senior Associate Editors

Mara Andersen completes her Master's in Public Policy at The George Washington University in Spring, 2013. She is also a Foreign Service Officer at the US Department of State. Over the course of her career, she has served overseas in Hong Kong, the United Arab Emirates, and mainland China, as well as in the Secretary's Office of the Global Partnership Initiative in Washington, DC. Mara is currently the Policy Officer for East Asia Pacific in the Department of State's Bureau of Educational and Cultural Affairs. Mara graduated from The Colorado College with a BA in East Asian studies in 2000.

Rebecca Blackmore is graduating with a Master of Public Policy degree from The George Washington University in May 2013. She is currently employed as a Budget/Policy Analyst for the US Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) and will continue working with HHS after graduation. In 2007, she graduated from Elon University with a business administration major and international studies minor. In her free time, Rebecca likes to run, try new restaurants, and paint.

Associate Editors

Cinthia Josette Arévalo is a Fulbright grantee from Ecuador and a second year Master of Public Policy student at The George Washington University, concentrating in program evaluation and international development. Josette earned a bachelor's degree in economics and finances at Universidad San Francisco de Quito, and a master's degree in development economics at the Latin American Faculty of Social Sciences, FLACSO-Ecuador. Prior to pursuing her graduate studies in the United States, Josette spent three years working as a monitoring and evaluation analyst in the Ecuadorian public sector.

Max Bentovim is a first year Master of Public Policy candidate at The George Washington University. He is currently employed as a Paralegal by the Transportation Security Administration, where he has worked since graduating from Dartmouth College with a BA in film and television studies. He likes to explore the culture and cuisine of the greater Potomac Watershed with his wife, Eve, and their basset hound, Porter.

Hasan Bhatti is a first year Master of Public Policy student at The George Washington University. He graduated from the University of Central Florida in 2010 majoring in political science with a minor in business administration. Before beginning his graduate studies, Hasan interned at the Embassy of Pakistan in Washington DC, on Capitol Hill, and worked with the State Department's International Visitor Leadership Program at a nonprofit in Orlando. Originally from South Florida, Hasan is a die-hard Miami sports fan who spends far too much time following the Heat and Dolphins.

Michael Holzer graduated from the University of Maryland, College Park in 2006 with a BA in English. He's worked in the private, nonprofit, and contracting sectors and everywhere in between as a writer, editor, and content creator. He is currently an MPP candidate at the Trachtenberg School with a concentration in health policy. He likes cooking, boardgames, and petting cats.

Tanya Harris Joshua pursues an MPA at The George Washington University's Trachtenberg School of Public Policy and Public Administration. She obtained a BA in politics from Mount Holyoke College in Massachusetts, and completed a graduate diploma in Public Administration at the Institut International d'Administration Publique in Paris, France. She worked previously as First Secretary at the Embassy of Micronesia in Washington DC, and now continues her career in public service in the US Federal government.

Brandon Kruse is a first year Master of Public Administration candidate at The George Washington University, where he is pursuing a focus in program evaluation and analysis. Brandon graduated from the University of Missouri-Columbia in 2007 with a bachelor's degree in journalism, after which he spent five years as a multimedia journalist on staff with The New York Times Co. and The Palm Beach Post, as well as contributing regularly to The Wall Street Journal. He currently works in the Budget Systems Branch at the Office of Management and Budget, where he spends many hours daydreaming of stardom as a professional racquetball player.

Erin Lockett is a first year Master of Public Administration student at The George Washington University. Erin graduated from Florida State University with a bachelor's degree in English and Humanities. Currently, she is working as a research intern for an education foundation. In her free time, Erin enjoys reading, entertaining, and catching up on her favorite TV shows.

Julia Watts is a second year Master of Public Administration candidate. Julia earned a bachelor's in political science and public policy from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. Currently, she works as an admissions counselor for GW's School of Public Health and Health Services. Previously, she worked as a student advocate for the Harlem Children's Zone and, prior to that, as a counselor for at-risk high school students with AmeriCorps. Julia continues to mentor younger students as a volunteer for Girls on the Run DC.