

Editorial Staff

Editor-in-Chief

Brandon Kruse is a second-year Master's of Public Administration candidate with a focus in program evaluation and analysis. He previously earned a bachelor's in journalism from the University of Missouri–Columbia and spent five years working as a multimedia journalist for such newspapers as The Palm Beach Post, The Wall Street Journal, and The New York Times Company. While attending graduate school, Brandon has interned with The White House Office of Management and Budget and the US Government Accountability Office (GAO). Born in Illinois and raised in Iowa, he will return to his native soil after graduation to begin a career as an analyst in the GAO's Chicago field office. Brandon looks forward to spending some well-deserved time off with his dog, Mika, and returning to his lifelong goal of fame and glory as a professional racquetball icon.

Managing Editor

Tanya Harris Joshua, a second-year Master's of Public Administration candidate at the George Washington University's Trachtenberg School of Public Policy and Public Administration, is a policy analyst in the US Department of the Interior's Office of Insular Affairs. An alumna of Mount Holyoke College with an AB in politics, she also completed graduate studies in French public administration in Paris. Prior to serving in the federal government, she was the First Secretary for Political and Economic Affairs at the Embassy of Micronesia in Washington, DC. She would like to help Pacific Islander youth further their education, but for now she and her husband have the privilege of raising their two sons and two daughters.

Senior Associate Editors

Michael Holzer is graduating with his Master's of Public Policy with a concentration in health policy from the George Washington University in May 2014. He graduated from the University of Maryland, College Park, in 2006, with a BA in english. He's worked in the private, non-profit, and contracting sectors and everywhere in between as a writer, editor, content creator, and general translator of the technical to the non-technical. He likes cooking, boardgames, and petting cats.

Erin Lockett is graduating as a Master of Public Administration with a concentration in nonprofit management from the George Washington University in May 2014. She graduated from Florida State University in 2012, with a BA in english and humanities. Currently, she works in nonprofit education, and will continue in this field after graduation. In her free time, Erin enjoys reading, entertaining, and catching up on her favorite TV shows.

Associate Editors

Odia B. Cisse is a first-year Master's of Public Administration candidate at the Trachtenberg School of Public Policy and Public Administration at the George Washington University. She is a citizen of Côte d'Ivoire and is concentrating in international development. She graduated summa cum laude with a Bachelor's degree in business administration from Wichita State University in Kansas. She currently works as a graduate assistant at the Trachtenberg School.

Julian Hoffman is a first year Master of Public Policy candidate at the George Washington University. He graduated from the University of Miami (Go Canes!) in 2009 with a BA in political science and international studies. He currently works as a lobbyist at the National Safety Council, where he focuses on a variety of safety issues. His previous experience includes campaign work at various levels of government, political direct mail and health care lobbying. Originally from Miami, he is an avid Miami sports fan, and spends most Saturdays in the fall watching football.

Andrew Kim is a dual-degree student, finishing his last year as a Political Science undergraduate student while also on his first year as a Master of Public Policy student. He has interned at a variety of federal agencies and is currently working at the White House Office of Management and Budget. He enjoys watching the NBA and taking long romantic walks to the fridge late at night.

Anne Kruse was born, raised, and educated in Columbia, Missouri, and with the exception of a year she spent as an exchange student in northeast Germany, she spent most of her life there. In May 2013 she graduated from the University of Missouri with majors in political science and German and a minor in leadership and public service. Anne also held positions at the Missouri Secretary of State's Office and the University of Missouri System's Government Relations Office while completing her undergraduate education. These experiences led her to become interested in public policy, so Anne moved to Washington, DC in August 2013 to pursue a Master's of Public Policy degree from the George Washington University. In her spare time, Anne enjoys running, watching SEC football, reading, and crafting crock pot masterpieces.

Tony Mastria is a first year Master's of Public Administration student at the George Washington University, focusing on state and local government. He graduated from UCLA with a bachelor's degree in political science and minors in public affairs, civic engagement, and environmental systems & society. Tony currently works as a graduate assistant in the Trachtenberg School of Public Policy and Public Administration, and has interned in several political and non-profit offices. In his free time, he reads, volunteers, and enjoys all manner of potato-based cuisine.

Christine Mellen is a first year Master's of Public Policy student at the George Washington University with a concentration in social policy. She graduated from Haverford College in 2006 with a double major in political science and German studies. Prior to pursuing graduate studies she worked as a paralegal for a small law firm in Washington, DC. She loves trivia, concerts, word games, Louisville basketball, and reading (especially on the treadmill).

Laura Saltzman is a first year Master's of Public Policy candidate at the George Washington University. She graduated from the University of Wisconsin-Madison in 2011. Prior to starting at the Trachtenberg School of Public Policy and Public Administration, she rigorously prepared for graduate school by working as a research assistant, chef, and poker dealer.

Mathew Vicknair is a first year Master's of Public Policy student at the George Washington University, concentrating in international development. He graduated from the University of St. Thomas in Minnesota in 2013, majoring in sociology and international economics. He is currently a Washington Area Studies Fellow in the George Washington Institute of Public Policy. He spends his free time in front of the piano, but not necessarily producing what could be called music.