EDITORIAL STAFF BIOS

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

Jessica Burnell is a second-year Master of Public Administration candidate at the Trachtenberg School where she is focusing on federal policy, politics, and management and health policy. She graduated from the George Washington University in 2014 with a Bachelor of Arts in economics, and currently works as a research assistant at the Duke-Robert J. Margolis, MD Center for Health Policy. When not studying or working, Jessica enjoys obsessing over her cat, Alexandra, trying out new restaurants with her husband, and re-watching The West Wing.

MANAGING EDITOR

Brittany A. Harris is a second-year Master of Public Administration candidate at the Trachtenberg School concentrating in education and nonprofit management. She graduated from Drexel University with a Bachelor of Science in Hospitality Management in 2009. After working in the hotel industry for several years, she became a Teach for America Corps Member in Metro Atlanta. Her three years as a 7th grade English teacher solidified her conviction that family, community, and school must work together for student success. With her degree, Brittany aims to make a larger impact on the lives of minority and low-income students through related policy and advocacy initiatives. In her spare time, Brittany enjoys reading, discovering new restaurants, and listening to podcasts.

SENIOR EDITORS

Thomas Coyne is a second-year Master of Public Policy candidate at the George Washington University concentrating in urban policy. He served as an Associate Editor for Policy Perspectives Vol. 24. His recent policy work focuses on community development, affordable housing, mental health, and substance use disorders. His prior experience in social work, within the mental health and foster care fields, serve as his motivation to develop effective policy. He previously served as an AmeriCorps*VISTA member working on community development in Detroit. He has dual bachelors in Sociology and Criminal Justice from Madonna University.

Haley Dunn is a second-year Master of Public Policy candidate focusing on program evaluation. She is most interested in criminal justice reform, social welfare policy, and saving the world more generally. In her free time, she enjoys binge-watching Netflix, visiting local breweries, and wandering around museums.

Megan Mattson, Executive Editor of the Policy Perspectives Blog, contributed to the final edits of one of the journal's articles. Her bio follows the Best of the Blog letter.

Jean-Luc Tilly is a second-year Master of Public Administration candidate, with a concentration in nonprofit management. After graduating with a BA in Government and Politics from the University of Maryland, he has worked for six years in healthcare performance measurement. First, Jean-Luc worked on a scorecard of state long-term care systems published by AARP, and currently manages measure endorsement projects at the National Quality Forum. He is interested in solving managerial problems, particularly around incentives and resource management, that confront the healthcare industry. Apart from work, Jean-Luc enjoys strategy games - from galaxy-spanning empire simulators to board games with friends.

ASSOCIATE EDITORS

Marissa Esthimer's bio follows her Best of the Blog article.

Carly Gordon is a first-year Master of Public Administration candidate at Trachtenberg with an interest in higher education policy. After graduating from the University of Virginia with a BA in Spanish and Psychology, she stayed in Charlottesville to serve locally with AmeriCorps. As an adviser with the Virginia College Advising Corps program, she worked on addressing the widening gap in college access for low income, first generation, and underrepresented students. She currently works as a Financial Aid Champion with College Access Fairfax, a partner of Fairfax County Public Schools.

McCall Hopkin is a first-year Master of Public Policy candidate at George Washington University. She grew up in Park City, Utah and loves the mountains. McCall started her policy career with United Way of Salt Lake, where she gained a deep appreciation for education reform work and the power of corporate social responsibility. Most recently, McCall worked with Q3 Student Partners to write and lobby Utah House Bill 312 on behalf of low-income and first-generation college students. She holds a Bachelor's Degree in History and Political Science from Brigham Young University and enjoys yoga, film, and petting everyone's dogs in DC.

Abigail Johnson is a second-year Master of Public Administration candidate at the Trachtenberg School of Public Policy and Public Administration at The George Washington University. She received her bachelor's in Psychology with a concentration in Applied Behavioral Analysis from the University of North Carolina - Wilmington. Her undergraduate work background includes running three psychology research labs, presenting findings as a "Presenting Author" at the 2015 Association for Psychological Sciences (APS) convention, and designing a data gathering system for a small pharmaceutical research company. As a graduate student, she worked alongside co-director Dr. Robert Slater at the American Councils Research Center, assisting in designing a national Dual Language Immersion model for public K-5 schools and in establishing such model within the Delaware Department of Education's system.

Claire Oto is a first-year Master of Public Policy candidate focusing on foreign and security Policy. She previously worked as a research assistant for Professor Samuel Kernell and graduated from UC San Diego with a BA in Comparative Politics.

Matthew Pickering is a first-year Master of Public Policy candidate at the Trachtenberg School and a native of central Pennsylvania. He spent several years in Philadelphia following undergraduate studies at Drexel University practicing architecture. He later moved on to a position with the Philadelphia City Planning Commission. At Trachtenberg, Matthew hopes to concentrate in urban and fiscal policy in the hope of returning to public service after graduation. In his spare time he dreams of design, public policy, and making the world a better place through some combination of the two.

LAYOUT EDITOR

Ellen Wang is a first-year Master of Environmental Resource Policy candidate. She graduated from the University of Cincinnati's DAAP program with a Bachelor of Science in Graphic Communication Design in 2017. She's working to combine complex ideas and concepts with better visual communication and storytelling methods. Ellen loves food, comics, board games, and travelling.