

Editorial Staff

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

Jack Nicholson is a second-year Master of Public Policy candidate at the Trachtenberg School. He graduated from University of Richmond with degrees in Leadership Studies and Journalism. After graduating from Richmond, Jack joined Teach for America's Nashville corps, where he taught middle school literacy and composition for four years. While living in Nashville, he also earned a Master's of Education from Lipscomb University and interned for the Nashville Mayors Office. When Jack is not working, he enjoys reading, hiking, and watching sports.

MANAGING EDITOR

Alex Borkholder is a second-year MPP candidate at the Trachtenberg School, with an interest in foreign policy issues. He currently works in political advertising and has experience working on congressional campaigns, in the United States Senate, and as program manager of a progressive polling firm. Alex graduated from the University of Florida with degrees in Political Science and Economics and a minor in Public Leadership. When not working or studying, he enjoys cooking, listening to audio books, and playing with Kona, his french bulldog.

ASSOCIATE EDITORS

Linsi Goodin is a first-year Master of Public Policy (MPP) student at the Trachtenberg School with an interest in education and social policy. Originally from Glade Hill, VA, she graduated from Virginia Tech with a degree in International Studies and minors in Chinese Studies, International Public Policy, and National Security and Foreign Affairs. Previously, she interned with the US Senate, the Association of Public and Land-Grant Universities, and spent several years clerking for her local county's court system between semesters while earning her undergraduate degree. In her free time, Linsi enjoys baking, spending time with friends, and exploring bookstores around the city.

Megan Johnson is a first-year MPA candidate at the Trachtenberg School. She graduated with degrees in Peace & Conflict Studies and Political Science from the University of Utah. Megan's past experiences working with local government, policy institutes, and federal agencies motivated her interest in equitable and evidence-based policymaking. In her free time, Megan enjoys doing Pilates, watching the Great British Bake Off, reading, and cooking—especially her favorite tortilla soup.

Kody Keckler is a first year MPP student at the Trachtenberg School. Originally from NE Ohio, he graduated from Northwestern University with a degree in Communication Studies and a minor in Gender & Sexuality Studies. After graduating, Kody spent four years working in HIV and COVID-19 research in Chicago. Kody's professional interests include community-based research and using queer theory as a lens to deconstruct systems of oppression. In his free time, he enjoys reading, tending to his houseplants, and exploring the city on his bike.

Alexis Lewis is a second year MPP candidate in the Trachtenberg school, with an interest in education policy issues. She currently works in higher education policy and finance, and has experience working in college admissions and higher education-focused nonprofits. Alexis graduated from the University of California, Irvine with degrees in Criminology, Law and Society & Psychology and Social Behavior. While not working, she enjoys swimming, reading, and picnicking.

Alek Libbin is a second year MPP candidate at the Trachtenberg School, with an interest in foreign policy, Congressional issues and the intersection of policy and politics. He currently works for a defense consulting firm, has experience working in the House of Representatives, the private sector and, volunteering for a hometown animal shelter. Alek graduated from American University with a degree in Political Science and a minor in International Relations. When not working or studying, he enjoys reading, long walks, gaming with friends and Sci-fi movies.

Charlotte Mitchell is a third-year Master of Public Administration candidate at the Trachtenberg School with a concentration in Politics, Policy and Administration. She currently works as a Legislative Assistant in the U.S. House of Representatives for her hometown Congresswoman. Charlotte graduated from the University of Oklahoma with a Bachelor of Arts in Political Science and Communication in 2017. Prior to moving to Washington, D.C. she worked on a statewide campaign and in a Congressional District Office. When not working or studying Charlotte enjoys reading, cooking/baking, going to workout classes, and watching sports.

Seth Morrison is a first-year Master of Public policy student at the Trachtenberg School, with an interest in international development. He graduated from UC Davis with degrees in History and English. Prior to attending George Washington University, he worked as a freelance editor on several projects, most notably he helped bring to market the memoir, My Exile to the World by Faustin Rusanganwa. His work as an editor, especially on Mr. Rusanganwa's memoir, led him to pursue an education at the Trachtenberg school. While not working he enjoys reading, writing, cooking, and binge-watching trashy TV.

Talia Nusbaum is a first-year Master of Public Administration candidate at the Trachtenberg School. After graduating from Cornell University with a Bachelor of Science in Industrial and Labor Relations, she spent a year in Israel working at an international non-profit organization. Currently, she works on voting rights and democracy issues at a grant-making foundation in Washington, DC. Outside of work and school, she enjoys reading, board games, puzzles, and camping trips.

Ramsey Rodriguez is a first-year candidate of Master of Public Administration at Trachtenberg School. Former Senior Program Officer at the Panama Field Office of the International Republican Institute, where he implemented Development Cooperation programming related to Democracy, Citizen Participation, and Local and National Institutional Strengthening. From Panama, he also supported project implementations in Mexico, Guatemala, Guyana, and Anglophone Caribbean. He earned a Master of Project Management from ADEN Business School. Ramsey is a biking and shared mobility enthusiast.

Dalton Wells is a first-year MPP candidate at the Trachtenberg School, with an interest in foreign policy. He graduated from Loyola University Maryland with a BBA with a dual focus in Business Economics and Finance. He currently works as a strategy consultant for Deloitte where he has focused on everything from strategic communications to countering mis-, dis-, and mal-information. When Dalton is not working, he enjoys reading, traveling, checking out national parks, and playing with his rescue pup, Harley.