
BEST OF THE BLOG CONTRIBUTORS

STAFF WRITERS

Chase Karbon is originally from Thousand Oaks, California and graduated from the University of Denver with a BA in Political Science. Following graduation, he spent a year of service with the education nonprofit City Year, assisting 9th graders with academic and social-emotional skills. Chase is passionate about education and transportation policy with an emphasis on how major urban centers approach both fields. His side interests include an unhealthy obsession with the Los Angeles Clippers, the New York Mets, his black labradoodle Hamlet, and whether the US will build a high-speed rail line in his lifetime.

Matias Bidegaray is a first-year Master of Public Policy student at the Trachtenberg School. He works as an Appropriations Research Assistant at Prolegis LLC and has previously interned on Capitol Hill. Matias has contributed to Morocco World News and the Quad City Times, covering American politics and international policy developments. He holds a BA in Political Science and Economics from Augustana College. In his free time, he enjoys following soccer and spending time with friends.

Azia Richardson-Williams is a native of Florida. She taught for five years in Atlanta before moving to Washington, DC to pursue a Master of Public Administration. With a focus on education and the arts, her classroom experiences shaped her passion for ensuring equitable access to educational and cultural resources. Now, she hopes to apply her skills to the intersection of public service, arts, and media, using policy to drive meaningful change in these fields.

Caroline Wendzel is a second-year Master of Public Policy student at the Trachtenberg School with a concentration in program evaluation and policy analysis. In 2020, she graduated from Emory University in Atlanta, GA, earning degrees in psychology and English/creative writing. From 2020-2023, she worked on the intake team at a domestic violence shelter in South Carolina. In her free time, she enjoys reading, spending time with her dog, and searching for the best vegan food in DC.

DEPUTY EDITORS

Luke Taylor is a first-year Master of Public Administration student at the George Washington University's Trachtenberg School. He has spent nearly eight years fundraising across a range of social needs, including community development finance and nonprofit media. He currently works at New York Public Radio, New York City's NPR member station, where his efforts support the development of local journalism and nationally distributed podcasts. He holds a BA in English and Theatre. In his spare time, he can be found singing, reading translated fiction from around the world, and weathering the latest disappointment in New York sports.

Cyrus Unvala is a first-year Master of Public Administration student. He is a Lieutenant Commander in the U.S. Coast Guard, primarily serving on buoy tending and ice breaking vessels in Alaska, the Pacific Northwest, the Great Lakes, and Antarctica. He holds a BS in Marine and Environmental Sciences from the U.S. Coast Guard Academy and a MA in Defense and Strategic Studies from the U.S. Naval War College, and he is a graduate of the National Outdoor Leadership School (NOLS). In his free time, Cyrus enjoys exploring the District by bicycle and any other outdoor activities.