
EDITORIAL STAFF BIOS

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

Naomi Atughonu is a 3rd-year PhD student specializing in public finance and budgeting. She holds a bachelor's degree in economics from the University of Nebraska-Lincoln and a master's degree in public policy, with a concentration in international security and economics, from the University of Maryland at College Park. Her professional experience includes work at the RAND Corporation, the U.S. Office of Management and Budget, and the Congressional Research Service. Outside of academia, she enjoys playing the piano, reading, hiking, and exploring museums.

MANAGING EDITOR

Christian Schamberger is a second-year Master of Public Policy student specializing in program evaluation, policy analysis, and applied economics. He also holds a degree in economics from Penn State. He is currently a Research Assistant for the Trachtenberg School of Public Policy and Administration, where he aids in faculty led projects and research initiatives. He also has experiences in campaign consulting, local advocacy, and federal and state emergency management program evaluation. In his free time, he loves to cook, bike, and explore DC with his fiancé, Tori. He is also an avid Chicago sports and Nittany Lion football fan.

ASSOCIATE EDITORS

George Doehne is a first-year MPP student in the Environmental Policy field of study. Prior to entering the program, he worked for three years as a paralegal in whistleblower law for plaintiffs' firm Cohen Milstein Sellers & Toll. In his spare time he enjoys running and hiking, birding, editing Wikipedia, and open-source cartography.

Grace Robinson is a second-year Master of Public Administration (MPA) student at George Washington University's Trachtenberg School, concentrating in Budget & Public Finance. She currently works at the U.S. Department of Energy's Loan Programs Office (LPO), where she supports the evaluation of innovative clean-energy loan applications in alignment with federal credit programs. Grace's academic and professional interests center on federal budgeting, economic policy, and the role of public finance in advancing long-term economic resilience. In her free time, she likes to go hiking and go to the movies.

Lara Kowalczyk is a second-year Master of Public Policy student concentrating in international environmental policy. She graduated from Wellesley College with majors in math and environmental studies. During her time at Trachtenberg, she has interned with the National Parks Conservation Association, World Resources Institute, and the Office of the New York State Attorney General. In her free time, Lara enjoys reading, traveling, hiking, and exploring new coffee shops.

Mücahid Aykut is a first-year PhD student in Public Policy and Public Administration at the George Washington University. He holds a BA in Political Science and Public Administration with a double major in International Relations, and an MA in International Relations from Kadir Has University (Türkiye). As part of his master's studies, he spent a term at Coventry University (the UK) as an Erasmus exchange student. He previously worked for six years as a research assistant at Altınbaş University (Türkiye) and served for four years as an associate editor of the Aurum Journal of Social Sciences. His research interests include public policy analysis, regulatory policy, and program evaluation with a focus on government efficiency and savings programs.

Ruoxi Lyu is a Ph.D. candidate in Gender and Social Policy at the Trachtenberg School, George Washington University. Her research focuses on gender-based violence, reproductive justice, population policy, and East Asian social policy.

Thakur Bhanu Partap is a first-year Master of Public Policy student at GW's Trachtenberg School, concentrating in International Development. Originally from India, he holds a Bachelor's degree in Engineering. He hopes to pursue development work across the global south after graduation. Also, he's deeply interested in international affairs and geopolitics. Outside the classroom, he enjoys meditation, yoga, and playing badminton.

Zach Benzaoui is a second-year MPP student at GW. He is focusing on social policy, urban policy, and policy analysis, and he is interested in leveraging public policy to improve government responsiveness to the material needs of the public. He has completed previous internships at the Brookings Institution and the Government Accountability Office, and he is excited to learn from his peers at Policy Perspectives. In his free time, Zach enjoys watching movies, listening to music, and experiencing all of the culture that the DMV has to offer.